The Orton-Gillingham Approach

In the early 1920's, Dr. Samuel Orton, the "Father of Dyslexia", developed a multisensory approach for the treatment of language disorders.

The Orton-Gillingham Approach (OGA) is based on his work in collaboration with Anna Gillingham, a teacher and psychologist. Current research validates the Approach and many programs owe their success to the principles of instruction laid down by Dr. Orton, Anna Gillingham and their colleagues.

The Orton-Gillingham Approach yields remarkable results. Practised worldwide, for example, in the Bahamas, Bermuda, Britain, Canada, China (Hong Kong), Pakistan, Singapore and U.S.A., Orton-Gillingham teaching is changing the lives of individuals with dyslexia.

The Orton-Gillingham Approach empowers students to succeed in school and in life.

Staff

Training is provided by Evelyn Reiss, B.Sc., B.Ed., M.A., Fellow/Orton-Gillingham Practitioner (AOGPE) and President, Canadian Dyslexia Society (CDS). Her qualifications include: Biology, ESL, English, Linguistics, Psychology, and Specialist in Special Education. Evelyn Reiss is a writer, teacher, and lecturer with over 25 years of experience in education. She is a founding member of the International Dyslexia, Ontario Branch (ONBIDA). Founder and principal of The Claremont School and Teacher Training Institute, The Writing Studio, and Plover Press. Evelyn Reiss has given numerous workshops and presentations for private and public school boards and literacy conferences.

Guest speakers are invited to present on specialist areas, such as, speech, occupational therapy, writing and reading instruction. Trainees will hear from experienced teachers who have been working in the field for several years and hear first-hand just how effective Orton-Gillingham linguistic therapy is.
